

Evaluation of ERNs, 2023

ME 2.1.1. The HCP team establishes collaboration with affiliated centres in neighbouring countries for cross-border care or for training / dissemination of information for professionals and patients.

ERN RARE-LIVER currently has 53 Full Members and 10 Affiliated Partners that cover 23 EU Member States (see the list below). It facilitates collaboration with additional healthcare providers and individual experts. Through this extensive network structure and the support from the coordinating office, all centres within ERN RARE-LIVER have a contact point to each other. Patient benefit from this structure when their treating physician consults experts within the network via CPMS, enabling the knowledge to travel, rather than the patient. However, patients treated in these centres can also be referred to other centres within the network easier, if needed. Information and training for patients and physicians is created in collaboration between experts from the network and is distributed to other centres via the channels of the network. The centres in the network also collaborate for research within disease specific working groups and by entering patient data in to the registry R-Liver. Knowledge is transferred by regular network meetings. Working groups meetings and clinical exchange enable network members to exchange very specialized knowledge.
